

Executive Order on the National Labor Relations Board and the Department of Education

11/01/2017

Q&A for Public Schools

What policy is asserted in the EO?

1. The EO asserts a policy of promoting school choice and parental rights. It states that the federal government should support and encourage the development of public charter schools, private schools, and other educational options that provide parents with more choices for their children's education. The EO also emphasizes the importance of parental involvement in their children's education and the role of schools in providing a safe and supportive learning environment.

What does the EO require federal entities to do?

The EO requires federal entities to take several actions to support school choice and parental rights. These include: (1) reviewing and updating federal policies and regulations that may impede school choice; (2) supporting the development of public charter schools and other educational options; (3) promoting parental involvement in their children's education; and (4) ensuring that federal agencies are working together to support these goals.

Which federal officials and agencies are required to take action?

The EO requires several federal officials and agencies to take action. These include the Secretary of Education, the Director of the Department of Education, the Secretary of the Department of Justice, the Director of the Office of Education Policy and Practice, and the Director of the Office of Charter Schools. The EO also requires the Secretary of Education to lead a working group to review and update federal policies and regulations that may impede school choice.

How are the stated policy and required action different from the past?

The EO represents a significant shift in federal policy and action regarding school choice and parental rights. In the past, federal agencies have often been focused on supporting public schools and ensuring that all children have access to a quality education. The EO, however, emphasizes the importance of providing parents with more choices for their children's education and promoting parental involvement in their children's education. This shift in policy and action reflects a growing emphasis on school choice and parental rights in the United States.

What past orders or actions were specifically rescinded?

1. [Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

What changes do we anticipate in federal policy, including regulation, guidance, enforcement, etc.? Specifically, what past administrative directive is likely to be changed significantly or rescinded entirely?

[Illegible text]

What will the impact be on local policies?

[Illegible text]